

Andromeda Group announces ASC certification of its Corvina REX

14th of November, 2019. Corvina REX, the star product of the Spanish division of the aquaculture group Andromeda Seafood, has obtained ASC certification (Aquaculture Stewardship Council) from the prestigious Bureau Veritas, the world leader in the field of certification services.

This achievement makes Andromeda Ibérica the first Spanish Corvina producer to obtain this endorsement, which at the same time underscores the company's commitment to responsible and sustainable aquaculture.

Created in 2010 by the leading international nature conservation organization, the World Wildlife Fund (WWF), in collaboration with the Sustainable Trade Initiative (IDH), the ASC is currently the most widely-recognized international standard for sustainable fish farming in the world. Its mission is to achieve the highest social and environmental standards in aquaculture, guaranteeing production that respects and promotes the conservation of biodiversity, natural resources and animal welfare.

All these aspects have been deeply rooted in the DNA of the Andromeda Seafood Group since it was founded, and forms a fundamental part of its business culture.

Eduardo Soler, representing the aquaculture company, was presented with the accreditation certificate by Bureau Veritas at a ceremony held in the Group's facilities in La Vall d'Uixó (Castellón).
